

Extra-ordinary dust event over Beijing, China during April 2006: lidar, Sun photometric, satellite observations and model validation

A. Papayannis,<sup>1</sup> C. Y. Fu,<sup>2</sup> Z. Huaqing,<sup>2</sup> V. Amiridis<sup>3</sup>, G. Chourdakis,<sup>4</sup>
G. Georgoussis<sup>4</sup>, C. Perez<sup>5</sup>, J.M. Baldasano<sup>5</sup>, H. B. Chen<sup>6</sup>, P. Goloub<sup>7</sup>,
R. E. Mamouri<sup>1</sup>, S. Kazadzis<sup>8</sup>, D. Paronis<sup>3</sup> and G. Tsaknakis<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>National Technical University of Athens, Physics Department, Laser Remote Sensing Laboratory,
15780 Zografou, Greece (apdlidar@central.ntua.gr)

<sup>2</sup>Chinese Academy of Forestry, Box 33, 100091 Beijing, China

<sup>3</sup>Institute for Space Applications and Remote Sensing, National Observatory of Athens, Greece

<sup>4</sup>Raymetrics S.A., 5 Kanari Str., Glyka Nera, Greece

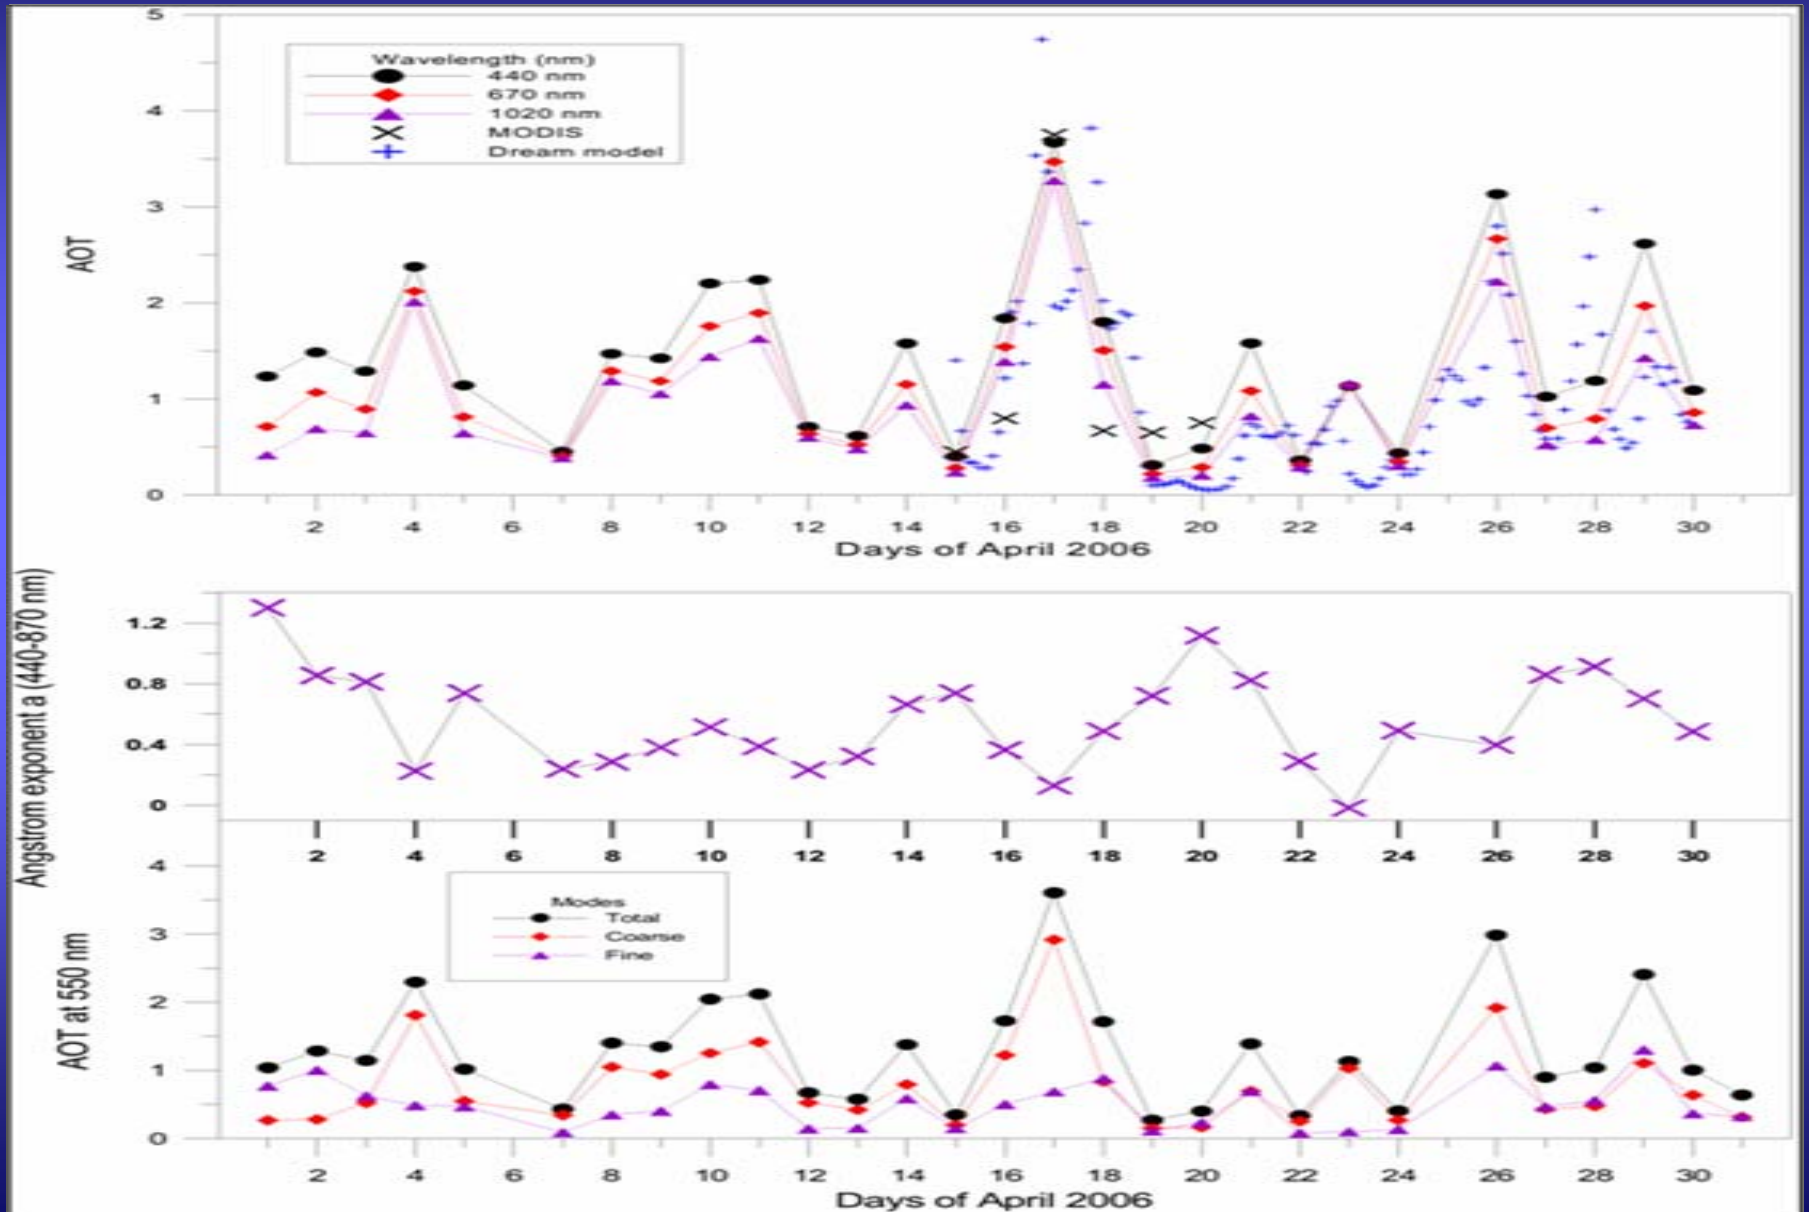

<sup>5</sup>Earth Sciences Division, Barcelona Supercomputing Centre, Barcelona, Spain

<sup>6</sup>Institute of Atmospheric Physics, Chinese Academy of Sciences, Beijing, China

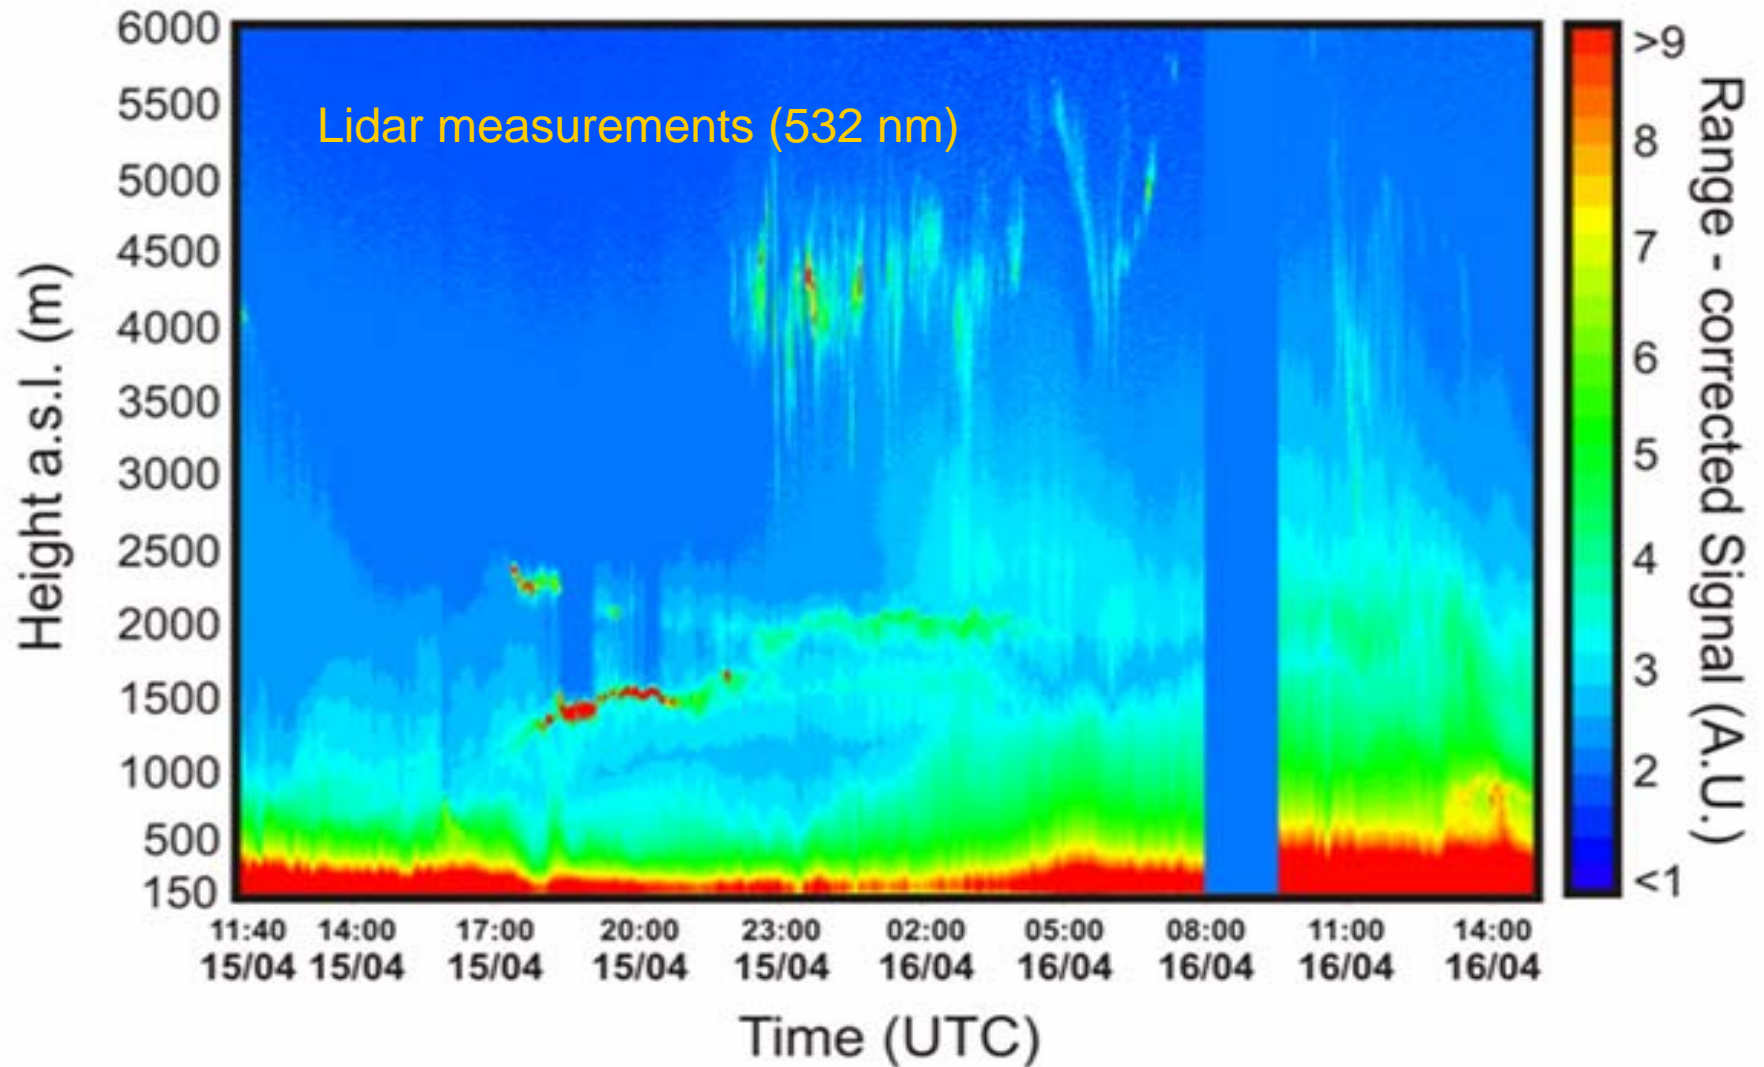

<sup>7</sup>Laboratoire d'Optique Atmospherique, Universite de Lille I, Lille, France

Experimental results

Experimental results

Experimental results

BSC/DREAM (12 UTC): Dust Optical Depth at 550 nm

